

The Little Seed and the Big Dream

A story about hope, patience and believing in yourself.

In a small village, there lived a little girl named Meera. She loved nature and spent most of her time in her grandmother's garden. One day, her grandmother gave her a tiny seed and said, "This is a special seed, Meera. It may look small now, but with care, patience and love, it will grow into something beautiful."

Meera smiled and held the seed in her hands, feeling excited about the little mystery it held.

Meera planted the seed in a small pot, watered it every day and kept it near the window where it could get sunlight. But days turned into weeks, and still there was no sign of the plant. Meera felt a little sad and wondered if the seed would ever grow.

One morning, her grandmother came and said, "Sometimes, good things take time. Just like you, you need to be patient. The seed is working inside the soil, even when you cannot see it."

Meera understood and continued to care for the little pot. She spoke to the seed, gave it water, and never gave up.

Patience

Time

After a few weeks, one fine morning,
Meera noticed a tiny green shoot coming out of the soil. Her heart filled with joy!

Day by day, the little plant grew taller and stronger. Soon, it bloomed into a beautiful flower, bright and full of life.

Meera realized that just like the seed, her dreams also need time, care and belief. She learned that even the smallest things can grow into something extraordinary if we never give up.

And from that day on,
Meera always remembered...

Big dreams
